Pablo Picasso's 'Bull' has eleven lithographs of the animal (bull) reduced to various stages of abstraction in a series of drawing.

The bull is fleshed out in the first lithograph and the successive ones are sketched to its simplest form. The artist uses few strokes in the last lithograph to awaken in us the idea of simplicity. Art is not about seeing more detail, but it is all about seeing less observing the basic; understanding that simplicity in form equals the spirit. Simple living is the hallmark of a meaningful life.

The Independence Day is a reminder to get in touch with our 'inner self' to raise our ideals, to appreciate the essence of freedom, to remember our forefathers with gratitude, to live simply and magnanimously.

It's time we elevate our thoughts and refine our way of life and speak & act from the very depth of our being.
